Reader's Theatre:

A group of seven students performed a readers' theater production that included three works by Dr. Seuss: Mr. Brown Can Moo, Can You?, "The Zax," and Oh, the Places You'll Go. The elementary teachers on the planning committee for "Read Across America" originally asked whether I could put together a performance with the intent of recording it and posting it online for elementary teachers to show at their convenience.

When I found the seven volunteers and told them of the plan, group members were adamant that they wanted to perform live. I communicated with Mr. Anderson, asking whether live presentations would be an option: He responded that the only way would be to have the group give separate performances in each of the 19 elementary classrooms. Despite the obvious demands of giving so many performances in a row, my troupe was eager to move forward. The troupe performed for the three sixth-grade classrooms on Thursday, March 4, and then 19 times at the elementary school on Friday, March 5. (See photo attached)

Seniors are in the process of planning their class shirt, and preliminary plans are underway for three potential senior class events: a class trip (probably in April), a senior class parade (probably mid-May, in place of the "senior service day" we have done the past few years) which would go past the two elder care facilities in town, and their last day events in June. Flexibility is being built into the planning, given uncertainties surrounding any event scheduled in these times.

We have NHS students tutoring 20 MS students.

The wood shop is finally up and running at full capacity, except for one machine.

HS Ambassadors worked with the New Richland Relay for Life team to collect money that will be used for Cancer Research. This is the first time we have helped with this activity. The shoes will be displayed until March 17th. We raised $102 towards the cause.

Our first group of Prostart students have completed their ServSafe food handlers certification.
